

MC1(AW) Martine Cuaron
Expeditionary Combat Camera, Norfolk

MC1 Cuaron is a native of Downey, Calif., and has 16 years of storytelling experience. He got his start in photography while assigned to Fixed Wing Fighter Squadron 41, as a tactical aerial reconnaissance pod technician. Serving three years and completing two deployments to the Persian Gulf, he continued to further his education by attending the Video Production course located at Ft. Meade Maryland in 2001. Upon completion, he was assigned to Command, Navy Recruiting Command where he produced advertizing/promotional spots. After completing a four year tour, he was then assigned to USS Abraham Lincoln (CVN 72) and was put in-charge of their video production department. After completing a Westpac deployment he applied and was accepted to attend the Syracuse University Military Videographer program in May 2007. Upon completion he then transferred to Navy Public Affairs Support Element-East. During his tour, he deployed twice to Africa and once to the Mediterranean. Upon transferring, he attended the Survival, Evasion, Resistance and Escape, Intermediate photojournalist course and the Essential Skills Combat course before checking into to his present command at Navy Expeditionary Combat Camera.
